The Problems

- Healthcare is one of the biggest issues facing America today
- Cost of healthcare is growing
- Quality of care also needs improvement

Is Technology the Solution?

- Electronic and Personal Health Records Systems may reduce costs and improve quality of care
- The majority of Americans support this approach...
- ...but also have privacy concerns

Access vs. Sharing your Health Data

- Over 85% of persons surveyed in a recent Harris Poll said they believe protecting the confidentiality of their medical records is “absolutely essential,” or “very important.”
- Over 60% of consumers want explanations up-front and the right to control how their information is used.
- Over 80% want to be able to review who has had access to their personal health information.
- Up to 80% of clinical trials are estimated to experience problems with recruit-ment.

Reg4ALL: Access and Sharing

- Participants are empowered with tools to ensure that their sharing concerns will be taken into account and respected.
- Participants can assure that approved requests to access or transfer relevant records are promptly filled.

Take an Active Role in Your Health

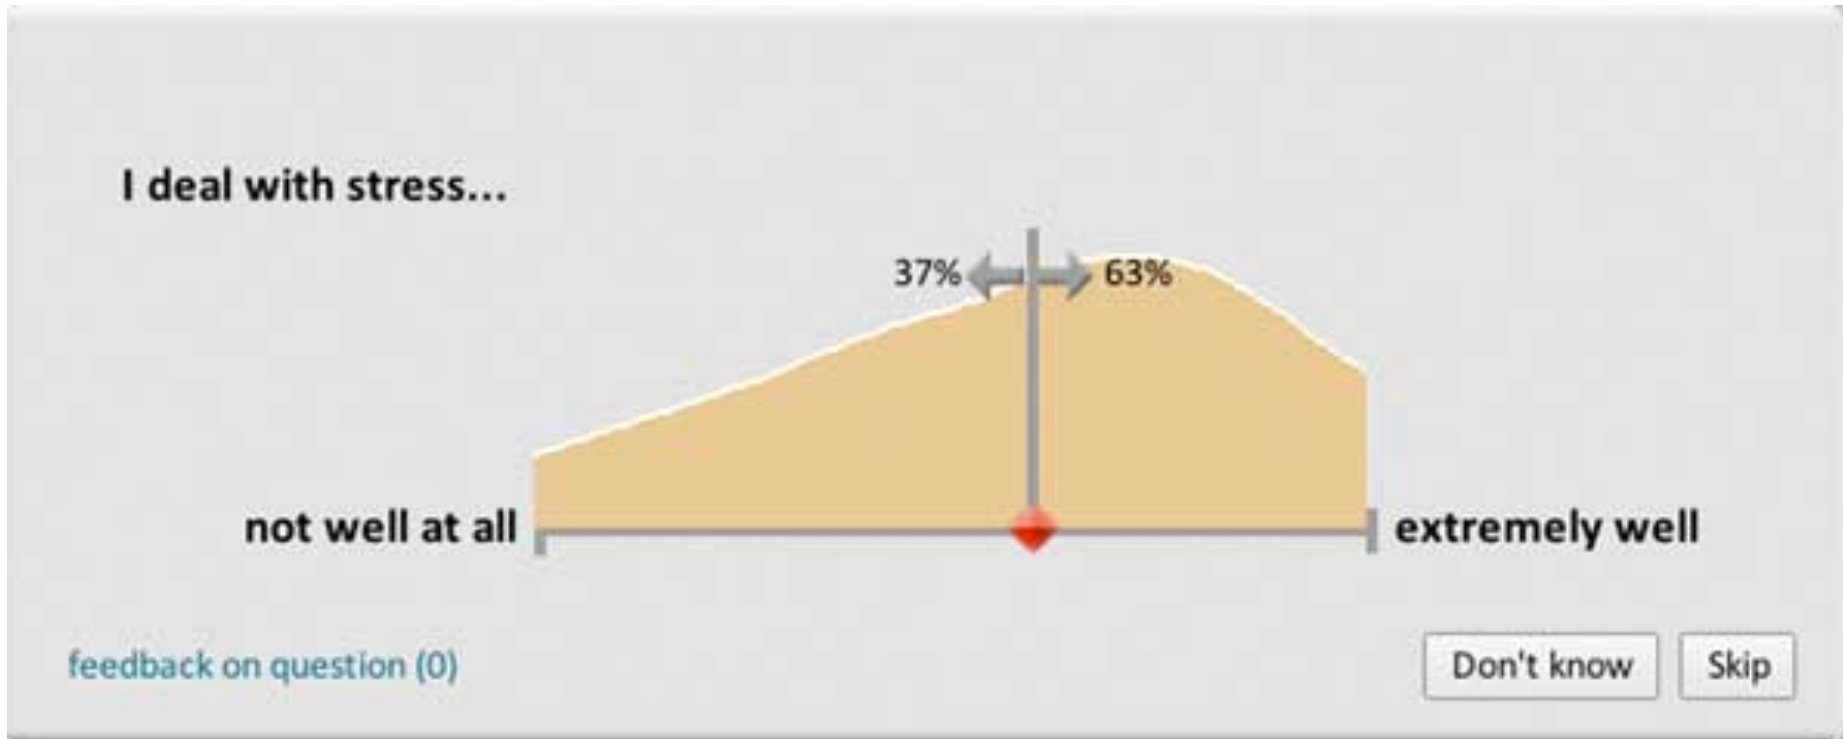

- Safely store your health data in one place (including electronic health record).
- Safely share your health data with the medical and research community.

Participation in Research

- Find relevant clinical trials and research studies that are right for you.
- Share your health data with researchers interested in your disease.

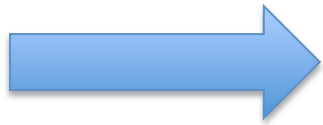

Compare Yourself to Others

- Answer questions about your health and learn about how you compare to others, including other with your disease

Ask Your Own Questions

- Is the medical or research community missing something you feel is important to your disease?

Ask it yourself!
